

Large scale storage - Moving from natural gas to hydrogen

Catherine Gras, CEO Storengy UK & Germany

To reach their decarbonization targets, European countries must change fundamentally their energy system, replacing most fossil fuels by renewable energy. Storage and other flexibility tools will play a key role to match offer and demand in regions with highly intermittent renewable production.

The presentation will look at underground gas storage today, their current role and their contribution to the emergence of a hydrogen energy system.